

At Northpoint, we wholeheartedly believe that parents have a God-given responsibility to be the primary educators of their children and are also responsible for the development of their spiritual and emotional character.

As children grow older and the time for their academic experience begins, some parents may choose to partner with an educational institution. There are many choices for this partnership and determining what is best for each child requires much prayer and deliberation.

Northpoint provides an alternative educational model that may be the appropriate fit for many families.

What Northpoint offers:

- A place where private school meets home school – a blend of the best of two worlds.
- A Christian program that seeks to provide a safe and secure environment of God-honoring students and staff.
- A partnership between committed parents and staff that fosters a mutual desire to honor Jesus Christ in all that is taught and modeled to their children.
- A partnership between parents and professional teachers who strive for academic excellence while instilling a love of learning and preparation for higher education.
- More flexibility for families to spend quality time together, learn together, and serve Christ together.
- An affordable alternative to traditional private schooling.

How to determine if Northpoint is right for your family:

As a full-time homeschool parent you:

- Desire to partner with other professional educators to enhance your child's academic experience.
- You seek fellow Christian teachers to mentor and disciple your child.
- You wish to focus more of your time teaching your child in your areas of personal expertise and desire to entrust some subjects to others more qualified than yourself.
- You want your child to experience a classroom setting in a safe, Christian environment.

As the parent of a traditional public or private school student you:

- Recognize that God has given you the responsibility to oversee and implement your child's education.
- Want to be the primary influence over your child's academic, moral and spiritual development.
- Want to spend more time with your children.
- Understand your responsibility and are willing to maintain your student's academic records.
- Seek an alternative educational model that provides academic excellence in a safe, Christian environment.
